

It seems that Sinclair Broadcasting is making its own opinions known to the American public by showing an "Anti Kerry" film, falsely called a documentary. This "film" has no place on public television before the election, especially in swing states. If allowed to show this film, it just goes to show how unprofessional and biased the news and large corporations are now. You can't allow this to happen.

I urge the FCC to uphold the law and demand that Sinclair not air this documentary before the election. Being that the FCC is here to serve the public and will quickly act on a simple thing like a human breast during a football game, I would think that an important and controversial issue such as this would be acted upon just as quickly.

Thank you.
